

Frode Forfang (born 1959) was appointed Director General of the Norwegian Directorate of Immigration (UDI) in June 2012. He has worked in the Directorate since 1998, and since 2007 as Deputy Director General. Before joining the UDI he was State Secretary for development cooperation in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. His professional background also includes positions as International Secretary of the Norwegian Labour Party and Information Officer at the European Commission's Delegation to Norway. Forfang holds a Master's Degree (MSc) in political science from the London School of Economics (LSE).